

What People Are Saying about The Settlement Game

“This is a life-changing book that will help you protect and preserve your family relationships as you go through the inevitable process of dividing up all the personal property of an estate. All of us—and our children—will face this issue some day. This book will tell you how to do this and remain friends.”

—DR. ROBERT A. ROHM, President
Personality Insights, Inc.,
Atlanta, Georgia
Author of Positive Personality Profiles

“It seems obvious to me that the author’s plan is worthy of dissemination in book form and that the book will be widely used by all who are faced with the important task of settling the problems, which are necessarily a part of the orderly transfer of property.”

—JUDGE GRIFFIN B. BELL
King & Spalding, LLP, Atlanta, Georgia
U.S. Attorney General 1977-79

“Thank you for helping us with the settlement of Mom’s estate using the information in your book, The Settlement Game. I recommend this to anyone who cares about protecting healthy, loving relationships . . . this could be responsible for transforming an otherwise negative and difficult process into a joyful and pleasant relationship builder.

—MRS. BILLY FLORENCE (PEGGY)
Florence Enterprises, Athens, Georgia

“Without hesitation, I recommend this publication to anyone who is faced with the responsibility of dividing the material assets of a parent. It is a practical and common-sense approach to making a very difficult task much easier.”

—TERRELL W. BENTON, JR
Hall, Booth, Smith and Slover, PC
Attorneys at Law, Athens, Georgia

“In The Settlement Game, Angie Epting Morris makes a vital contribution to America’s families. So many hurts happen in the aftermath of grief that damaging conflict over possessions should be avoided. This book is a down to earth conversation based on experience as well as observation about how to prepare for working constructively through the decisions to be made about division of possessions. Preparing beforehand avoids regretting afterwards.”

—JIMMY R. ALLEN, JR
Past President of Southern Baptist Convention,
Big Canoe, Georgia

“None of us would prefer to deal with estate planning and settlement, but it is an inevitable fact of life, and it is best to be prepared. Angie Morris has put together a very interesting plan to avoid pain and hurt feelings when dealing with sensitive estate settlements. The Settlement Game offers an opportunity to bring about effective communication and resourceful planning, making a difficult time in life easier to manage.”

—LORAN SMITH
Contributing Writer and President
Georgia Bulldog Club, Athens, Georgia

“Angie Epting Morris has written a powerful book. The Settlement Game provides a common sense solution to a proven problem. I commend Angie for sharing her experience and wisdom with the world. Relationships are precious.”

—MARGARET S. ROSS, President
Kameron Institute,
Peachtree City, Georgia

“Thank you so much for sharing The Settlement Game with us. We had a very special time of settling everything up. It was a great way to remember fun times and share “remember when” stories as we were playing the game. Everyone was pleased with the division, and there were no hurt feelings anywhere. This is something I would recommend to every family!”

—CATHY MCMILLAN
McMillan & Associates,
Birmingham, Alabama